

Here's an idea or two of things to do

ON YOUR OWN

Pictures for Miss Josie

MISS JOSIE, who was in real life Josephine Carroll Smith, grew up in Washington, D.C. In many ways the city she knew was very different from the Washington of today.

See for yourself how this is so. A site named DUKE ELLINGTON'S WASHINGTON has many parts telling about the city of Washington as it was in the 1920s, 1930s, and 1940s and the people who lived there. When you get to the site, poke around. Many of the interesting and amazing facts you'll find in the different areas may surprise you.

<http://www.pbs.org/ellingtonscd/>

When Josephine Carroll Smith was growing up she lived in a community known as Georgetown. Like the city, the Georgetown of her time was very different from the Georgetown of today. The sites below give ideas of how. At the first site you can read an article from a newspaper. At the second you can see a short video clip.

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2006/07/14/AR2006071401398.html>

http://wdchumanities.org/film_view.cfm?ID=21

Want to see aerial views of Washington, D. C. as it looks today? Visit the site below. To get a larger picture of each view, click on the photo.

<http://photo2.si.edu/aerialdc/aerialdc.html>